Camera Raw Camera Raw is a photographer-focused version of Photoshop that gives users access to the same tools and options as Photoshop, but more specifically designed for making the most out of RAW files. When you import a RAW file, it is brought into Photoshop with no color or tonal adjustments made. You must use Photoshop's tools to make the image more appealing and correct issues. Camera Raw extends the capabilities of Photoshop by allowing users to view, tweak, and manipulate images like a high-end DSLR camera. Premiere Pro Premiere Pro is an editing tool and image-editing platform that is comprised of Adobe's flagship video-editing software, Adobe Premiere Pro, and Adobe Media Encoder (AME). It's designed for both offline editing (non-internet video) and online streaming. Flash In addition to its use in web pages, Flash is used as an application for creating a range of interactive and web-based features. Why it was upgraded Prior to the recent release, Photoshop held steady for a long time. There have been a few minor upgrades over the past 10 years or so, mostly with minor features and bug fixes. In October 2013, Photoshop was updated with new features that addressed issues that were affecting photographers and designers. These updates included the introduction of the Lens Correction filter, a tool for correcting lens distortion on photos. The update also included features that were meant to improve image editing, such as Smart Sharpen and Adaptive Sharpen. According to Adobe, the update was meant to enhance and simplify workflow. Since the release of the update, Adobe has added new features and improvements, such as a Content Aware Fill tool that makes filling in holes in photos a fast and easy process. This article will take an in-depth look at some of the most notable updates in the latest version of Photoshop. Lens Correction Lens Correction is a new lens-correction tool that aims to correct lens distortion, chromatic aberrations, vignetting, and focus problems in photos. It can be used to create an image-editing experience that's like a real camera, where users can correct for their mistakes. Lens Correction requires users to first use a new Control Panel that has been integrated into the Lens Correction tool. After running the tool in PS, a panel will pop up with a live grid showing

Q: using variables in recursion in java I am using a class with a method that uses a recursive method and variables. Is there a way that i can pass variables into that method? I have tried using String variables and it did not work. public void recursiveMul(String s, int a, int b, int c){ if(a!= 0) recursiveMul(s+a,b,c); else if(b!= 0) recursiveMul(s+a,c); else if(c!= 0) recursiveMul(s,a,b); } A: Is there a way that i can pass variables into that method? Yes, but not directly. Java passes values, not references. There is no mechanism to pass references to variables. A: That's a bit hard, there is no way to do this. However, you can use a temp variable to accomplish this with less code public void recursiveMul(String s, int a, int b, int c){ String temp = s; if(a!= 0) recursiveMul(temp + a,b,c); else if(b!= 0) recursiveMul(temp + a,c); else if(c!= 0) recursiveMul(s,a,b); } Cross-sectional echocardiographic studies on healthy chimpanzees (Pan troglodytes). Echocardiograms (echo) were obtained in 21 captive chimpanzees (Pan troglodytes), ranging in age from 6 months to 27 years (2:1 male:female), with weights ranging from 3.5 to 65.9 kg, and in 10 free-ranging male and female chimpanzees of unknown age. Age- and sex-matched grey and white Newfoundlands were used as a comparison group. Echo measurements included left ventricular posterior wall thickness and wall-to-lumen diameter ratios, left atrial (LA) and LV end-systolic diameters, wall thickening, interventricular

COMMENTARY: I'm not trying to be a smartass or anything, but I've been researching senior management and a fair amount of it has to do with intuition or "gut." This is not something I'm a great proponent of, so you might want to reconsider the things you believe and are willing to accept. I try to avoid things like the "magical thinking" often employed by parents when their children's problems seem overwhelming. Now I'm not asking for you to agree with me, but I am asking you to think about the last time you were uncertain about a decision you made or did not make. Think about the decisions you've made since that time. Have you made good decisions or did you follow the "gut"? From business and government down to your family, decisions are based on many things.

Some are more logical than others. But in the end, it comes down to making good, solid decisions with the information available to you. If you were given an opportunity to prove whether you have "gut" or if your choices are based on the data available to you, which would you choose? In my next blog I will share some data about the most common positions senior managers are in. I'll review the data and present the results. I will also share my opinions as to whether or not these are good or bad positions to be in. Until then, how did you decide on the position you are in today? If you were making a decision for the first time, what positions would you consider?Q: Is there a way to tell what ports are open in the java api? My software has a small server that listens on port 4500. However, this is not accepted by any other server, which I would like to know which ports are open on the machine. Is there a way to do that in a simple way for Java's serverSocket class? A: The ServerSocket object allows you to bind to specific ports, which enables you to discover what ports are currently available on the machine. You can do this using the bind() method. It returns true if it was successful, or false otherwise. ServerSocket ss = new ServerSocket(4500); System.out.println("Registered server on port 4500
