Post navigation Recent Review: Operation Recruit Call This year, I was offered the chance to attend a military training camp that would be combining the basic Military Operations (battlefield) course with the 12-week Active Shooter training. So I chose Operation Recruit Call as it seemed more "hands on" than traditional classroom training, and it still had a civilian component - most of the trainees would be civilians. This is a full-day training that is offered either as 3-day, 6-day, or 12-day, which covered all aspects of the U.S. Army. The 12-day is a full day of basic training, and the 6-day is a basic training day, followed by a half-day of testing, and then on Saturday a full day of training covering things like Intelligence, Surveillance and Reconnaissance, combat medicine, and more. The 3-day and 6-day is basically the classroom, followed by a one-hour testing. That one hour of testing is your chance to see where you are in the Army. There are "soft marks" for attendance, etc. You can then sign up to attend a two-week instructional course at Fort Benning, or if you get a low score on the testing you can attend a three-week instructional course at either Fort Sill or Fort Bragg. This year, I chose the 12-day. There was actually a promotional video on YouTube about it. It gave a great run-down of what it included and how it would be different from traditional basic training, but in reality, a bunch of classes run at the same time. The basic classroom days consisted of day long classes on things such as unit history, organization, unit culture, core values, leadership, intelligence, CT (Combat Training), ethics, supply & maintenance, health and safety, and more. It was a very laid back, relatively casual atmosphere. The training was split up into four courses. Firearms - A full-day of classroom and live-fire training, with the ability to shoot with an M4 or M16. It was three
