What's new in Elden Ring:

Monkey's post was amazingly specific about some of his issues/concerns with the game, albeit being specific about different things. I find myself agreeing with a lot of what he said, with the sole exception of how often low level trainers actually send you to the next level (it's not usually the case). And while it is truly excellent work when your submitted games are played in the finished game, sometimes I wonder if I'd be happier if I was playing some of the games as they were submitted at first. Part of that is because of the amount of critiques in the comments, but I personally think that when the presentation is so horrible that I'm either automatically talking to myself or feeling sad for the author, I think that's when a game needs a second or third chance to get the presentation right. That is, I feel that a game like Diaries of a Spaceport Janitor has the potential to be great, but it's currently fun, and it's also clearly still a large work-in-progress, so at that stage I'm okay with the fact that it's not as perfect as a game full of polish at the release stage. But if there was just a small bit of polish or presentation work at the beginning of the submission process, I think I could've been happier overall. But yeah, if it's more polished later on, I would be okay with that. Now I just kind of hope the developers keep on going towards the release stage. It's like Monkey's saying " I am an old man, because I feel this". Why post to a forum until you feel you can be accepted because you post many times. Yea they are still playing the game themselves. And I really like seeing the work they put in. And that molding story line is great. I really am hoping each time I play the game I will be able to hear more from the protagonist. I really don't care the story line of the game is like the History of the World. I can care less about the Kingdom of Skyeth's of the world. If I want to play history I will play a history game. yawn It's like yelling at a brick wall. Get better or get lost I say, I can't take all these reviews and suggestions to heart. - The lack of at most 3 friend invites to the guild
