I have to calculate $$\int \sin^2 x \, \cos^3 x \, dx$$ How is it possible, since sin² x is not an even function? A: Write $$\sin^2 x = \frac{1-\cos 2x}{2}.$$ So your integral becomes $$I =\frac{1}{2} \int \left(1-\cos 2x\right) \cos^3 x\, dx = \frac{1}{2} \int (1-\sin^2x) \cos^3 x\, dx$$ and from the identity $$\sin^2 x + \cos^2 x = 1$$ we get $$I = \frac{1}{2} \int \left(1-\frac{\sin^2 x + \cos^2 x}{2}\right)\cos^3 x\, dx = \frac{1}{2} \int \cos^3 x\, dx-\frac{1}{4} \int \sin 2x \cos^3 x\, dx = \frac{1}{2} \left(\frac{\sin 2x}{2}\right) - \frac{1}{4} \frac{\sin 4x}{4}$$ by the substitution $u=2x$. In the case of diamonds, a typical cut set in a ring or setting may cost about $2-3 per carat. When the above estimates are multiplied by the vast quantities of jewelry made, the cost of manufacturing can be significant. For example, an estimated $1 billion is annually made or purchased in the United States. Since the price of precious metals and gemstones fluctuates, the cost of a particular piece of jewelry changes over time. As such, the cost of manufacturing jewelry as a percentage of the overall cost may also change depending on price fluctuations. For example, in the case of retail sales of jewelry, the price of diamonds may be very high. In addition, in the case of a ring for example, there may be considerable labor expense required to take the rough stone, cut it, and set it within the ring, making up the difference in cost as a percentage of the overall cost. While the above is an illustrative example of the cost structure of jewelry, there are, of course, many other types of valuable commodities and goods that may be similarly costly to manufacture. Such goods may be made by individuals or small businesses (e.g., welders, jewelers, artists, and artisans) and may require a more customized approach to reduce or eliminate the manufacturing cost. The present invention provides a simple and cost-effective method and system for producing jewelry using reconfigurable materials. In addition, the present invention provides a system and method for simultaneously producing a multiplicity of rings or other articles using a wide variety of reconfigurable materials.New Approach to Design and Synthesis of Novel Anti-Inflammatory Agents Based on 8-Substituted Quinaldine Derivatives.
