==== Please justify and fill in this description. :) Greece's government has resorted to a Facebook campaign to keep groups of refugees away from camps in the northern regions. The so-called 'find your friends' initiative has so far been a success. On Wednesday, the Greek government gave notices in newspapers and on local television for refugees to register as they prepare to move to camps in the country's northern areas. The notices state that anyone without an ID will be sent back to Turkey where they first crossed into Greece. The deadline to register is the start of the school year. Greece's north-eastern border area is the final destination for nearly 300,000 refugees who have crossed into Greece through the Eftalou and Evros gates in the past two years. Hundreds of refugee camps have been set up in the region. In the northern port town of Mytilene, where many refugees travel by ferry and tour boats to reach Greece, the camps have two main features. There are tent cities with water, electricity, bathrooms and kitchens for refugees, while nearby are warehouses where many of the refugees sleep in tents and under plastic sheeting. In the city center of Mytilene, the Greek government has suspended all activity, because the camp houses up to 3,000 people. The mayor has asked for international help, because there is only one center for 1,000 refugees. The mayor, Asimina Katsanari, said the situation in her city is very serious. "This is beyond tolerance," she said. "It's impossible to function. We are talking about 10,000 refugees here and we have one place for 8,000." Greece's government has tried many times in the past two years to keep the refugees away from the Eftalou and Evros gates in the north. The government has constructed additional fences, built public swimming pools and is offering free accommodation to those who don't register as official refugees. Katsanari said she is also afraid the government will be sending in Greek police to deport the refugees. "We are afraid they will come with
