I need to add the string from variables1 to the string from variables2. This is the first time I'm working with variables so I'm kind of lost. Many thanks. A: You can use join(): >>> x = "a" >>> y = "b" >>> z = "c" >>> xy = "".join([x, y, z]) >>> xy 'a b c' IN DESERT OASE, a multi-generational fairytale community in Palenque, Mexico, some 80,000 people were displaced during the construction of a giant telescope there. The community, whose economy has long been built around tourism and the entertainment industry, was badly hit. That meant the state government was the last to receive its due payments. It then took four years to pay its employees. Due to its remote location, the hilltop site is also far from Mexico's more highly developed coastal cities, where there are good hotels and air fares. But the engineering difficulties of building the giant mirror in the desert also meant that there was no money for the workers and their families. With revenues from its extensive local businesses still down, the government found it hard to do the job. The total cost of the telescope was $130m, but the local government did not pay for anything beyond the main building. As the costs mounted, the Mexican government's remote location also meant it was the first to be hit by the Zika virus and other diseases. This is one reason why, for the first time, the World Bank has agreed to lend the Mexican government $600m. If it does not pay that money back on time, it will have to pay higher interest rates. The scheme, which also includes some $400m in debt-for-nature swaps, will push the investment needed for the country's airports, roads and schools even higher. But it is not expected to be enough for the government to meet its deficit targets: the figure is now forecast to be 3.8% of GDP, well above its previous target of 2.4%. Indeed, the International Monetary Fund has suggested that this target may need to be revised. As a result, Mexico has asked its bondholders to accept lower interest rates. The large private creditors, of which most are based in Mexico, stand to earn about $5.9bn from the loans. That in turn will add to their own debt-to-
