Currently, I think (at least for me) this is what is missing in the language. Perhaps an idea is already here with dynamic attributes, but I can't tell. I know you already accepted your answer, but I'd still like to express my opinion. You didn't mention that you're working in a PHP project. I'd like to add that PHP, for many reason, is not the best language to code in an enterprise environment. Given that you have a list of requirements I'm not entirely sure you're able to develop your solution on top of PHP. I'm not able to give you any recommendations regarding languages, but PHP is probably not the one. When I first began reading the request I was going to suggest HTML5 + custom Markdown tags. After reading it more carefully, i think this is a great solution as well since it will work on any site that uses these tags and any site that supports Markdown. I built a website where I use Markdown and I'm very happy with the results. The key is that you need to combine the Markdown with the HTML. To do this is very simple and I will give a quick example. To begin, you need to create a div with a specific class. This class will have what you want to write in it. The rest is handled by the Markdown. The syntax for the Markdown is very simple; you just need to include the delimiter: `{}` and the text you want to write between them: c9d1549cdd

Streets of Rage 4 (known as Streets of Rage 4 in Japan) is a 2018 beat 'em up arcade game developed by Dot Emu and Team Igo for the Sega Genesis. The game is the fourth in the Streets of Rage series, following 1995's Streets of Rage 2, 1999's Streets of Rage 3, and 2015's Streets of Rage 4. It was released in arcades in 2018, developed by Dot Emu and published by Sega. The gameplay focuses on the "4-2-1" rule, dividing the player's attacks between four of the five characters from the original trilogy, and ultimately culminating in one final showdown. It features an updated version of the original 1993 soundtrack composed by Yuzo Koshiro. The game was announced as a console port of the arcade game at the Sega Genesis Forever event in January 2018. However, it was later announced that it was in fact a third-party release, and that it was being developed by Dot Emu after the cancellation of its previous project for Sega's new Dreamcast console, Sonic Adventure 2: Lost World. The game was to be released for the PlayStation 4, PlayStation Vita, Microsoft Windows, Nintendo Switch, and Xbox One in early 2020, prior to its winter 2020 release in Japan, 2019 in Europe and North America. Gameplay Streets of Rage 4 is a 2.5D hack-and-slash beat 'em up video game, where the player controls one of the three playable characters, Carl, Axel or Blaze, which can each wield three different fighting techniques: basic attack, combo and finishing attack. When armed with a number of Spinning Pikes - forming the game's primary weapon -, there is a limited number of special moves that can be performed by Carl, Axel and Blaze, which inflict different effects depending on how they are performed, such as burning opponents' clothes or making them leave their weapons. Spinning Pikes is used to counter opponents' attacks as they strike Carl, Axel or Blaze. The fight progresses in rounds where, by accumulating points, the player's character succeeds in dealing more damage to his opponent by using a number of cost-effective moves as much as possible, such as standard attacks, basic attack or hopping for a certain number of times, frequently alternating between two characters. In the Streets of Rage series, the ability of a character to jump and wall-jump unlocks when a "critical" amount of health is lost, during which time they will perform a standstill move.
